DRASTIC INJUNCTION GRANTED GOVERNMENT BY FEDERAL JUDGE WILKERSON IN CHICAGO

LOCAL WHOLESALE GROCERY HOUSES GREAT FEEDERS TO RETAIL BUSINESS OF THE WHOLE TENNESSEE VALLEY

(By J. E. Blair.)

Just as cross roads positions became county seats and business centers throughout this world in the days before the invention of the steam engine and the printing press, so in America, where great railroads have crossed, we have established industrial centers and laid out beautiful cities. If history is allowed to repeat her self (and she is anxious to do so) where the two great trunk lines the Southern and the Louisville and Nashville cross in Morgan county, there is destined to grow up a mighty city with hundreds of thousands of happy and busy people. And this will happen; we may not live to see it, but it will happen. No other conclusion is thinkable, especially when in addition to this we bear in mind that the fourth largest river of our country every second of the time is rolling at our feet, and impatient, so to speak, to carry the fruit of our industry to the uttermost parts of the earth.

The wholesalers of this section, as well as those promoting industries had such thoughts in mind when they began to establish their houses here as far back as 1889. It was then the present firm of Brock and Spight, first entered the whole sale business here—both gentlemen giving up, or rather selling out their retail stores, to furnish the merchants of the then small towns, and the surrounding counties, with their supplies of staple and fancy groceries.

John L. Brock, the first named of the firm, about the year 1880, was a young country lad from Lawrence County come to the town of Decatur to make his fortune and he made it and a big one. W. R. Spight was a young man who originally came over from one of the Carolina states, and he made his fortune here; so much so that the firm of Brock and Spight, mostly owned by Mr. Spight at this time, is rated in Dunn and Bradstreet as a "AxA 1" which being interpreted means that the Brock and Spight firm is worth over $750,000.00.
Like all the other wholesale houses here this concern's rating shows that it discounts its bills, which means in every day language "pays cash for every thing."

The business under consideration, adds grocery sundries to its regular trade in staple and fancy groceries as do the other concerns described. It served the merchants in Morgan, Marshall, Madison, Cullman, Limestone, Colbert, Lauderdale, and Giles County, Tenn. When Brock and Spight began it was in the Echols building, just where the Echols Hotel now stands.
Later they were on Bank Street, and now they are in their new modern building, 154x100 three floors with a storage basement and 13,000 feet to the floor or 39,000 feet floor space in all.

The building is at the "foot" of Bank street where it intersects with Lee street and is almost touching the large Louisville and Nashville freight depot.

The J. H. Calvin Company

All the letter heads of the J. H.
Calvin company, bear the motto "The House of Service and Appreciation." Outside of such words as love and affection, no other express greater thoughts than do "service" and "appreciation". Mr. Calvin when seen plunged into a discussion of the service rendered by wholesale jobbers.
He said they came into the field early and would be on the earth when it burned up, or was rolled up like a scroll.

"There was a big manufacturing concern, that decided to sell direct some years ago; but soon found that it would have to establish large warehouses throughout the country and virtually go into the wholesale jobbing business; result, that concern is now coming back to the jobbers and asking them to sell their products."

"To illustrate how we can serve most efficiently" continued Mr. Calvin, "suppose a man wishes to get his teas and spices on the market? It would be as unbusiness like for him to do it independently as for a farmer to hitch up and carry a small package to town, when he could send it by a neighbor who was already hitched up and ready to drive. Because we wholesale people handle so many different kinds of products, we can do the whole job of distribution cheaper than for each manufacturer to handle his own productions."

The J. H. Calvin company has branch houses in Hartselle, Athens, Cullman, Russellville, and Gunters-ville. The managers in charge at these places are the same, with possibly one exception, as have been with Mr. Calvin since the organization of his business in 1915.

"We have been doing a business of from one to one and a half million dollars a year" said Mr. Calvin, "with a force of about thirty men, directly in our employ, but of course hundreds more men handle our goods. We cover more territory than any other like concern in North Alabama, counting in all our branch house."

"Another great service done by the wholesaler is to import goods from all parts of the world, where the smaller merchants can get them and retail them to the thousands of families and individuals." Mr. Calvin took occasion to say a front page story in yesterday's Birmingham News bore out a prediction of his that some of his townsmen had been laughing at—namely that the cotton crop was a "good one."

The J. H. Calvin company is located at the intersection of Lee Street and Second avenue, close to the A. Z. Bailey Grocery company on Second avenue.

The A. Z. Bailey Company

With two stories and a basement, with a building 160x100, built "mill style" with giant heat pine girders it took three months time to secure) and with the cement basement as cool as a cucumber on a hot August day, the A. Z. Bailey Grocery company, stored full of so many human wants made a lasting impression. But another pleasantly impressive thing was that A. Z. Bailey, Jr., had complied with a telephone request and acted as a "fact finding committee" of one as to the number of human wants supplied by such concerns as his, the J. H. Calvin company and the Brock and Spight company as follows: Peanuts, pepper sauce, pimentoes, pipes, rope, salad dressing, axle grease, stock and poultry powders, stove polish, sweeping compound, tea, tooth picks, twine, vinegar, vinegar pumps, washboards, yeast macaroni, soup,
corn, kraut, tomatoes, milk, pineapple, peaches, asparagus tips, beans, hominy, apricots, blackberries, cherries, pears, coconut, raisins, oysters, salmon, sardines, tuna fish, corn beef, cooked brains, potted meats, sliced meats, sliced beef, sausage, chili con carne, spaghetti, catsup, chili-sauce, apples, pumpkin, apple butter, spin-ach, beets, peas, okra, cranberries, syrup, soaps, washing powders, lye, gun shells, drugs, spices, thread, shoe polish, envelopes, shoe leather, extracts, snuff, talcum powder, chewing gum, borax, starch, coffee, matches, crackers and cakes; candy, cereals of all kinds, baking powder, rice, dye, fruit jars, caps and jar rings, soda, cigarette, tobacco of all kinds, bran shorts, cow feed, oats, corn, meal, hulls, hen feed, horse and mule feed, hay, beet pulp, salt, sugar, flour,
meal, nails, wire, lamp chimneys, lard, produce, meat, potatoes, paper bags, roofing, brooms, tin ware, toilet paper, baskets, cheese cutters, cheese, school tablets, lard trays, horse shoes, ice cream cones, ice cream salt, jelly glasses, seeds of all kind, oil cans, mops, gloves, overalls, hose, oil cloth,

President and Cashier Complete 40 Years Service With One Bank

Colonel C. C. Harris, president of the City National Bank and W. B.
Shackleford, cashier of the same institution, completed a record unusual in banking circles in Alabama.

While the name of the bank has undergone more than one change, the president and the present cashier of the institution have served the institution continuously for 40 years and today began their 41st year of service.
Messrs. Harris and Shackleford were officials of the old First National bank, later becoming associated with the newly organized Bank of Commerce, which finally was merged into the present City National bank, one of the flourishing financial institutions of North Alabama.

Colonel Harris and Mr. Shackle-ford are widely known throughout the state and have a host of friends in this immediate section. Congratulations today were pouring in upon the two officials.

Bob Dobbins Will Be the Assistant Coach of Howard's Football Squad

Bob Dobbins, well known local resident, has accepted a position as assistant coach of Howard college's football team for the approaching season. He will assist Coach Cope in developing a football machine which will reflect credit upon the Baptist institution.

Mr. Dobbins was a football star at Sewanee, being placed on the mythi-cal all-Southern football team by a majority of sport writers for four years in succession. His defensive work in the line is said to have never been equaled on a Southern gridiron. Given adequate poundage, a fighting heart and a good football head, Dobbins, for four years was the mainstay of the mountain Tiger's squad.

Later he aided Coach Cope in developing the 1916 squad of Sewanee scrappers, said to have been the greatest football team ever developed from similar scant material.

The combination of Cope and Dobbins, it is believed by Howard back-ers, will give Howard a running start toward Southern championship honors in secondary colleges.

Holding Babe In His Arms, Father Shoots Wife to Death In Knoxville Home

(By International News Service.)
KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 1.—Mrs.
Henderson Cuthshaw, young wife of a farmer living near here, is dead today and her husband is in jail, suffering from a wound inflicted by officers when he resisted arrest.

Last night Mrs. Cuthshaw prepared supper for her husband and some guests. She appeared at the front door and announced to the party that the meal was ready. Cuthshaw, without one word of warning, and in the presence of their guests, pulled a revolver and fired, the bullet striking Mrs. Crenshaw in the right eye.

Cuthshaw, who held his two months old babe in his arms when the fatal shot was fired, fled, taking the child with him, but was captured later by officers.

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—Department of Justice operatives today were on a still hunt for "reds" and radicals, following the alleged discovery of a plot to kidnap or kill the presidents of the New York Central, Pennsylvania and Rock Island railroads.

The identity of one of the plotters is said to be known and his arrest was expected momentarily.

According to reports, the instruction of the plotters to "red" lieutenants have been found, in which the lieutenants are asked to look up the home addresses of the three railroad presidents and learn if they have any children, so we can either kill or kidnap them and take the children."

It was said that the radicals being sought are all foreigners.

PLOT DISCOVERED

(By International News Service.)
CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 1.—A plot to dynamite the Cuyahoga river bridge, on the Belt line railroad, was frustrated today when four men were discovered digging a hole near one of the main support of the bridge.

When surprised in their activities, the men opened fire and routed the two guards, then escaped by jumping into the river and swimming to the opposite shore and driving away in a waiting automobile.

Traffic across the bridge has been suspended. All the bridges in the city now are under guard.

DECISION IN TWO WEEKS EXPECTED BY LABOR BOARD

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—Spokesmen for over 200 railroads submitted testimony to the railroad labor board today in the hearing of the maintenance of way men for a minimum wage of 48 cents per hour. The board was expected to hand down a decision in the next two weeks.

TEMPORARY ORDER ISSUED TODAY AND HEARING SET FOR SEPTEMBER 11 TO MAKE PERMANENT EDICT FROM FEDERAL COURT

What Injunction Provides

(By International News Service.)

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—The injunction asked for by Attorney General Daugherty seeks to enjoin striking railroad men all over the country from:

- Arguing with anyone who announces that he intends to go to work for a railroad.
- Parading.
- Holding public meetings to show how strong the striking organizations are.
- Writing to a friend advising him to leave railroad employment.
- Throwing stones at freight or passenger cars or locomotives.
- Calling railroad employees names (this probably includes the term scab.)
- Walking down a railroad track or right of way.
- Interfering with, hindering, or obstructing in any manner the agents servants or employees of the railroads in the performance of their duties.
- Interfering, obstructing or hindering the inspection, repair, operation or use of trains, locomotives, cars or other railroad equipment.
- Preventing, or attempting to prevent, persons from entering railroad employment or continuing in railroad employment.
- Loitering in the vicinity of any railroad station, roundhouse, switch tower, water tank, railroad yards, or railroad office.
- Agreeing with other union members to hinder workers from going to work.
- Telling a worker that it is unsafe for him to remain in railroad employ.

(International News Service)

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—A temporary injunction, restraining all shop craftsmen and their leaders from interfering in any way, whatsoever, with the operation of railroads throughout the country, was granted today by Federal Judge James A. Wilkerson, at the request of Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty.
The hearing to make the order permanent was set for September 11.

STRIKE GOES ON

(By International News Service.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—The injunction asked by Attorney General Daugherty, in Washington today, will not affect the continuance of the strike of the federated shop crafts, declared William H. Johnson, president of the international Association of Machinists the largest single union involved in the strike, when informed today of the government's new move in the strike.

The government's action is understood to be based on the precedent established in the famous Debs case in 1894, when President Cleveland procured an injunction in the Western Railway strike. At that time Debs was sent to jail for six months for contempt of court and the supreme court of the United States subsequently held that the government has the constitutional right "to protect the channels of trade and interstate commerce."

The injunction asked by the Attorney General is "broad enough to drive a horse and wagon through," it was said by legal authorities with whom Daugherty conferred before going to Chicago, and could be made to fit almost any kind of a case.

Under the construction placed on the phraseology by some legal authorities, it was said the government could, if it so desired, now proceed to order the shop craft leaders to call off the strike on the ground that it was interfering with interstate commerce and the transportation of United mails.

Failure to comply would lead to contempt proceedings and jail.

Legal authorities differ as to the exact extent of the government's power under the injunction asked, according to senators with whom Daugherty talked before starting proceedings.

All agreed, however, that the powers asked by the government are extremely broad and will permit of a wide range of action.

DEFENDANTS NAMED

(By International News Service.)

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty, before United States Judge James A. Wilkerson today asked a blanket injunction against all railroad employees in the country, from interference in the operation of the railroads during the present railroad strike.

The defendants named are: railway employees department, American Federation of Labor and its officers, the striking shop crafts and their presidents and 119 other system federations, with their presidents and secretaries.

The petition, which contained 50 closely typed pages, sets forth that on July 1, 400,000 members of the federated shop crafts laid down their tools and "combined and conspired" to leave their posts of employment in refusal of awards made by the United States railway labor board, which the petition points out, is an organization organized by federal statute—the transportation act.

The petition alleges that in thus overriding the labor board, the federal shop workers "showed contempt for the board and through the board for the government of the United States."

The petition seeks an injunction restraining the defendants, named from interfering, obstructing or in any way hindering the operation of railroads.

It was said by those closely in touch with the situation that any violation of such an injunction, issued by the federal court at the request of the Attorney General himself, probably would mean the employment, if necessary, of the whole standing army of the United States to enforce the court's edict.

BOMB EXPLODES

(By International News Service.)

GADSDEN, Sept. 1.—A bomb was exploded at the office of the Gadsden Car works last night about ten o'clock no one was injured and small damage was done. The car works have been running since Monday and putting out cars for the Southern Railway system.

At a meeting of the local unions this morning this action was condemned and resolutions were passed saying that the men on strike will aid in maintaining law and order and will aid in apprehending anyone who does violence.

WE FAVOR ACCEPTANCE OF HENRY FORD'S BID FOR MUSCLE SHOALS.

CAN GIFTS BETWEEN LOVERS AND FRIENDS HAVE A MONEY VALUE?

Yesterday's Daily carried the story of an actress who returned the money, spent on her, by a suitor to whom she had given the "mitten". The action of this girl raises a nice question of ethics as to the giving and receiving of gifts and attentions that cost money. The conclusion of Miss Terry, the lady in question, was that wherever a jilted fiance demanded it, the one doing the jilting, should make such a money payment as to satisfy all concerned. There can be no question as to the exact justice of such a decision—especially where the parties have become engaged to marry each other. But what is known as "exact justice" meets few of the requirements of high class people. There are not many men who would wish a return of the money they "spent on their best girl," regardless of whether she continued in that relation or not.

Old fashioned usage required that girls should not accept presents of value from men acquaintances. And there was reasonable ground for such a ruling. Good will was not supposed to be bought by favors. In fact the girls were taught to "be ware of men bearing gifts". Besides a certain obligation rested upon the recipients of gifts, that was not welcome, it was argued by mothers that "if you accept his gifts, the suitor will begin to believe that you accept him", and thereby too great encouragement might be given. The wisdom of this kind of reasoning is apparent when we reflect that of all creatures, men are the most vain, when it comes to the opposite sex—men invariably believe, if given the least encouragement that their friend is "dead in love", and ready to marry him at the drop of the hat.

Those who are sticklers for freedom of individual action, will decry restrictions being placed on either sex in the matter of giving and receiving presents. Such will any leave it up to the individual judgment. And some with high spirit for adventure, will declare that full value received is gotten out of every cent of courtship money—ever spent, and that hence neither "lover" owes the other one penny regardless of how the courtship terminates. This view is held by the vast majority of people, as is evidenced by the fact that it is very seldom that any thing is ever said or done about bills made, by young people who are having a good time.

If the question of gifts, and their value is carried to a final conclusion, not many would agree that any true gift has any intrinsic or money value.

The highest teaching we have on giving is to the effect that if we give expecting to receive in return, we are really not giving a gift but making a trade of some kind.

WOOD ALCOHOL CONTINUES TO CLAIM MANY VICTIMS

Despite prohibition, lots of people persist in drinking whiskey and they are not over particular about the kind of whiskey or the effect its drinking may have. As a result we read every day or so of people being poisoned by drinking wood alcohol. The distressing part of such poisoning is that it generally either kills the drinker or renders him blind or paralyzed.

Wood alcohol is now killing 260, and blinding 44 Americans a year. This is the report of the Russell Sage Foundation's national committee for prevention of blindness. The figures, however, cover only known cases. The unknown victims of wood alcohol number many more.

"Many relatives and friends of victims try to conceal the real cause of death, and in some cases cases succeed," says the committee's secretary, Mrs. Winifred Hathaway.

Obviously she is right. For more than half of the 130 fatal cases of wood alcohol poisoning reported to her committee in the first six months of this year, were in three states—New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

Smuggling hooch is common along the sea-coasts. As you get farther inland, the liquor keeps getting harder to secure—which means, worse quality.

In Pennsylvania, the known deaths due to wood alcohol last year totaled 61. Figuring on a population basis, wood alcohol deaths in all states combined would be around 800 a year.

Including unreported cases, wood alcohol's death toll probably succeeds 1500 a year.

To keep many people from taking their lives, steps should be taken that will prevent the use of wood alcohol as a beverage.

Any high grade chemist could find a way. Before manufacturers were permitted to superclarify wood alcohol "for use in the arts and allied professions," any one with a sense of smell could detect wood alcohol a yard away.

Now it is refined until, in adulterated form, it smells like old Kentucky rye. Only a chemist can detect it. Why not color all wood alcohol black or restore its natural odor?

The Chinese would solve the problem by beheading any one selling wood alcohol for a beverage. That, of course is not humane enough for us. We Americans prefer to spare the bootlegger and kill the victim.

Uncle Sam should look into this matter. Life has to be made fool-proof for a certain per cent of the population.—Anniston Star.

STATES WAKENING UP

Georgia has a port development campaign on the same as Alabama. The port on which the State energies are being concentrated is Savannah and the remarkable feature of the campaign is that it was instituted by a member of the legislature from an agricultural county, not by the authorities of the port. The farmers of Georgia are most concerned in securing a seaport for the storing and shipment of their surplus crops. They want a port in touch with the markets of the world where big freight carriers will have facilities and from which their products can be expeditiously handled to any foreign market.

The governor of Georgia and some of the best-known State leaders appear to be very active for State are of the opinion that in the next election the port development and the newspapers of the it will be an overshadowing and winning proposition.

North Carolina is centering on Wilmington and South Carolina Charleston, in schemes of making bigger and better seaports for the handling of the cotton of those States to foreign markets and to Northern mills by water. Florida is concentrating its port building efforts on Jacksonville; Virginia has, with the help of the national government, made a big port at Norfolk and Louisiana is spending the millions earned by its port terminals and vast warehouses in bigger facilities. Texas has brought the gulf inland by canal to the port of Houston, although already having a great port in Galveston. All these improvements have been, or are being authorized by the people of the State undertaking them. In each State where the question has been submitted to the people the agricultural vote has gone heavily for the port improvements.

Alabama can not afford to be behind the other Southern States in building up its seaport to the point of efficiency in handling State products to the markets of the world. The cotton crop and industrial production demand port facilities within control of the State, and thereby in control of producers, which will be adequate to maintain an equality in port movement with other States. The great importance of the open port and the maintenance of a channel to the sea for the products of Alabama is seen in the present railroad situation. A shipment of cotton by rail to an Eastern mill has no guarantee of immediate delivery at this time. If the cotton is stored at Mobile, delivery by steamer to a New England port and by truck to the mill makes the shipper and consignee independent of the railroads. This is one illustration of many that could be given of the State-wide advantage of having a first-class port at Mobile. The influence of water rates in lower rail rates has been experienced to the advantage of many points in the interior of the State, and the people of the interior are just as much interested in the providing of modern port facilities as the people of the coast.—Montgomery Advertiser.

THE EARLIEST AMERICANS

For many years scientists have been puzzled over the Mays ruins along the rim of the Caribbean—in Yucatan, in Guatemala, in Honduras. There were great temples, and cities and a civilization which was far in advance of anything yet found on this continent. The race which built those cities is gone—absolutely. The hieroglyphics on steel and monuments show the last to have been erected about a thousand years ago.

Now Chicago archaeologists have discovered another city, even more vast than Chichen Itza, located this time in the hinterland from Santa Marta, Columbia, in the province of Magdalena. There are signs of a tremendous population there at one time. Houses cover the mountains for miles, each built on a walled terrace, and showing a high degree of skill in working stones and in building. There are miles and miles of paved roads, about four feet wide, for foot travel. There are many evidences that the vanished people were artful workers in gold and silver. Their pottery is exceptionally fine. At every house is the metate—such as is used by the natives of the tropics with which to grind corn and make the tortillas, which are the staff of life. Who these people were, no one now can tell. There is no history of them, and thus far no inscriptions or monuments, such as the Mayas erected, have been found. So great a degree of civilization possessed by these people could have been possessed only after centuries of struggle upward; and it must be concluded that the era of those earlier people must go back to the very dawn of time.—Mobile Register.

"FORGET-ME-NOT" DAY

Wounded and disabled veterans of the world war confined to the hospitals throughout the country is engaged in making "forget-me-nots" from paper cloth.

On November 4 in every city and town of the United States these little mementoes will be sold on the streets for what they will bring.

This is the means used to obtain funds to carry on the relief work and rehabilitation and to find employment for our war cripples. The receipts will augment a fund that will provide clubhouses and summer camps and pay for other welfare activities.

This is an appeal which we believe will be met with a hearty response. Regardless of what has been written, of what has been claimed, of the large figures that have been presented, there is still much to do.

The one debt that the men and women of this country never will be able to repay is that which we owe to those who lost a means of livelihood through their participation in the war.

The federal government has done a great deal. The people have given freely. But neither has done enough.

We cannot, we must not forget the wounded and the disabled.—Nashville Tennessean.

Hartselle News

HARTSELLE, Ala., Set. 1.—The little 9 year old son of T. E. Shaw happened to a painful accident Thursday, having his leg broken, presumably by a kick from a mule. Mr. Shaw is doing some contracting work on the road west of town, and the little fellow was with his father. When the boy was found, the bone was protruding through the flesh and was stuck in the ground, supposedly from the fall. He was immediately carried to Benevolent hospital, and at last accounts was getting on reasonably well.

Chief of police James C. Rogers received a tip Thursday that a buggy load of whiskey was headed his way along the pike west of town. He accordingly secreted himself near the Woodall bridge across Flint creek and awaited the approach of the driver. When he came into view a start was made by the officer toward the buggy, when the driver abandoned it and took to the woods, leaving the buggy and the contents to the officer. The haul netted 6 1-2 gallons of whiskey, but the alleged offender made good his escape.

Cotton is bringing in the markets $10.00 per hundred in the seed, which means $100.00 for a thousand pounds. Under the prevalence of bred up seed which yield a large portion of lint, much greater than former years, it is possible to get near 50 pounds of lint from a hundred pounds of seed cotton. With this high average prevailing, 1,200 pounds of seed cotton should make a 500 pound bale, or more. At 22 1-2c per pound in the lint, a 500 pound bale would bring the grower $112.50, and he would have the cotton seed extra. To sell in the seed would net at the present price $120.00. The advantage gained by getting the seed back would more than compensate for the difference, and as the bagging and ties more than pays the cost of ginning, there is a distinct advantage gained by having the cotton ginned, especially if the variety of cotton is of the large lint producing variety.

Formerly thousands of dollars is lost to the cotton grower each season by selling in the seed. The government has spent much time and pains in calling the attention of the cotton growers of the Southland to this fact, and has advised the ginning of the cotton and selling the lint, for in this way only can the staple be sold on its merits. The process has not gained any appreciable headway during the last few years, in spite of the plea of the government authorities in this branch of our national service.

WINIFRED BLACK WRITES ABOUT Middle-Aged Women and Work

Copyright, 1922, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

MRS. ROBERT ARMSTRONG, personnel director of a big Eastern firm, says that she'll take a middle-aged woman into the office and set her to work when she'll let a young girl go by.

"Middle-aged women are more sensible, they work harder, they work longer and they're more interested in their work than girls," says Mrs. Armstrong.

I wonder if she's right?
Girls—what a difference there is in them!
Some are sane and sensible and practical, and some are giggling and silly and unreliable—but isn't the same thing true of middle-aged women?

No, I don't suppose it is—not quite.
The middle-aged woman has had some sort of sense drummed into her head by hard work and trouble.

She knows that nobody is going to lay down a rose-colored velvet carpet for her feet, and she's through looking for a rose-colored satin parasol and a pair of rose-colored satin boots.

She used to want these things, Oh, yes! And she used to think she'd get them, and every time she went to the movies and saw the Beautiful Cloak Model in the last act in her laces and furs and diamonds, she used to think, "That's the way I'll look, when my ship comes in."

But now she knows that she probably never will look like that at all, and that her ship isn't a ship really—it's just a plain little rowboat and she's perfectly satisfied to have it so.

Winifred Black

very best she can, and she will make her hours at the office her life. And if she's the right sort of woman she'll mother the girls, yes and the boys, too; and make a wholesome, cheerful, sensible, honest atmosphere that will be worth a hundred a month to any office.

And she won't be watching the clock to get out to meet him at the corner, and she won't be carrying a letter around in her shirtwaist and making excuses to take it out and read it over again. And every time the telephone rings she won't start and blush and if the head book-keeper has nice eyes, or a "way with him," she won't make errands past his desk a dozen times a day.

Yes, the middle-aged woman makes a good clerk—if she's the right sort at all.

The young woman? She's a good clerk, too—maybe. But being a clerk comes second or third or fourth in her scheme of things.

She's a girl first and a "blonde" next and somebody's sweetheart next to that, and a fiancée with an eye to the bargains in kitchen furniture next to that. Bless her heart! Who wouldn't have her that way?

I wouldn't give a snap for an office that didn't have a heedless, good-natured girl with her head in the clouds, traipsing in and out, powdering her nose and manicuring her nails and making large eyes at the world—even if she only sees it from the window of an office building.

Contrasts of Purpose

Maybe she doesn't do quite so much work for the boss, but, dear me, she does her best and whenever I'm impatient with her I wonder whom she's helping at home and remember how proud her mother is of her and how honest and self-respecting she really is under all the giggles and all the powder, yes, even all the rouge, for if she wasn't honest and self-respecting, she wouldn't work for a living—long.

Here's to the girl in the office building, and here's to the middle-aged woman, too, may they be good friends and good pals—and good clerks too, and more power to their elbows!

Who Can Tell?

She's learned that fine frocks and fine houses do not mean happiness—maybe she's had some of them and found out what frauds they are.
But anyhow, if she's middle-aged and looking for work, she'll be grateful to find it, and she will be interested in it and she'll try to do it the

RAIL MEETING IS HELD AT PRINCESS

The following official communication was issued today by J. E. Blair, secretary of the press committee of the federated crafts:

Rev. J. A. Blankenship opened a largely attended meeting of the rail strikers with prayer this morning.

Reports of Frank Lewis showed that the largest donations so far were made this morning and yesterday to the strike fund. There was considerable enthusiasm over the donation of the Catholic Ladies Society of Albany and Decatur. Reports of publicity and information committees aroused enthusiasm.

The meeting closed with prayer by Chaplain L. E. Toon.

And Tunkins says an envious man suffers so much that while you can't admire him you've got to sympathize with him

WOMAN'S ILLS MAKE UNHAPPY HOME

There is no question but what the ills of women conspire against domestic harmony. The husband cannot understand these troubles, and the physician finds it hard to cure them; therefore the overworked wife and mother continues to drag around day in and day out with headaches and backache, fretful and nervous.

Such women should be guided by the experience of women whose letters we are continually publishing in this paper. Many of them declare that they have been restored to health, strength and consequent happiness by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound under doctors and all other medicines had failed to help them. It will surely pay women who suffer from ailments to try it.

FAMOUS "WITS" OF HISTORY

Little Stories of Men and Women Whose Sayings Are Still Remembered By MARK STUYVESANT

The Way Catherine the Great Reproved Her Secretary.

At the time of her official dinner, the great Empress broke into a terrible trade and displayed her temper before all of the dignitaries of the court.

After this outburst she overheard the secretary, who was devoted to her, say that it was a too bad she had made such an unfortunate display. She immediately calmed down, changed her expression, and also the topic of conversation, and was a brilliant and witty Catherine again.

One of her contemporaries speaks of her as a "woman who is a great man." She had the qualities of leadership and ambition rarely found in a woman; she had a masculine brain, she had great feminine beauty and charm, but, above all, she had wit.

She used this brilliant wit to great advantage, not only in holding her own little sleep that night, and dreaded the summons which he knew would be his early the next morning.

As he expected, bright and early—for the queen arose at six—the secretary was sent for. As soon as he was admitted to her majesty's apartment he rushed toward her and threw himself at her feet, begging for mercy.

Catherine turned him on the head and told him to arise. Much to his astonishment, she did not appear cruel or even perturbed—on the contrary, she seemed amused. He was overcome as she presented him with a beautiful snuff box, set with diamonds. She laughed, and said:

"Keep this, and when you have a observation to make in public of what I say or do, hold your tongue and take a pinch of snuff. This reminder may be of use to me."

Catherine Presented Him with a Beautiful Snuff Box.

statesmen under her spell, but she also exercised it in establishing cordial relations between herself and diplomats from foreign powers.

She speaks of this herself in her memoirs in these words:

"Do you know why I dread kings' visits? Because they are generally tiresome, insipid people, and you have to be stiff and formal with them. These persons of renown pay much respect to my unaffected ways, and I would show them all my wit. Sometimes I show it by listening to them. As I love to chatter, the silence bores me."

Catherine not only knew her powers—she knew her failings, as well. She spoke of them in an amusing way. Her chief fault was an almost ungovernable temper. She was so conscious of this fiery, volcanic temper that she always made of Vesuvius as "my cousin."

J. Asa Rountree
To Make Extended
Trip Over Roads

J. Asa Rountree, at one time Morgan County resident, but now director general of the national good roads association, with headquarters in Birmingham, was here today greeting old friends.

Mr. Rountree, one of the most active advocates of good roads in the nation, will leave soon for an extended tour of the east in the interest of the organization which he represents.

Later Mr. Rountree will go over the route of a proposed highway from Texas into Mexico and to Mexico City.
On completion of the road, which will be an extension of the Bankhead highway, the road will be an international one.

When We Get It
We Get It Out

We realize that it is often necessary for a firm to get printing done quickly. We do not believe that, in case of the rush order it is necessary to sacrifice Good Printing for speed.

Considering the speed on this kind of printing we do the quality of the work is invariably gratifying to our

Common Sense About Eczema and Eruptions!

Here's Something About S. S. S. That You'll Be Glad to Hear.

You might just as well know it right now—the cause of skin eruptions, pimples, blackheads, boils and so on, is right in the blood. There is no getting away from it. Science has proved it. We prove it. You can see it in two ways. When the cause of skin troubles and eruptions is in the blood, it isn't com-

Let S. S. S. Give You An Angelle Skin! Don't see to simply treat the skin. A bottle of S. S. S. will prove to you what is happening in your blood. S. S. S. is a scientific blood cleanser.—It drives out the impurities which cause eczema, tetter, rash, pimples, boils, blackheads, blotches and other skin eruptions. When these impurities are driven out, you can't stop several very nice things from happening. Your lips turn naturally rosy. Your eyes sparkle, your complexion clears. It becomes beautiful. Your face looks like that of a prosperous, ruddy, well-fed, refined gentleman, or if you are a woman, your complexion becomes the real kind that the whole world so admires. S. S. S. is also a powerful body-builder, because it builds new and more blood-cells. That's why it fills out sunken cheeks, bony necks, thin limbs, helps regain lost flesh. It costs but a few cents to have this happen to you. S. S. S. is sold at all drug stores. In two a case. The larger size is the more economical.

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 1.—Arrangements were made at the county jail today for hanging Frank Dupre, convicted slayer of Detective Walker, at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Altogether Too Frank

When I was 14, a new scholar came to our school. He was a boy one year my junior, and he and I fell deeply in love with each other. We exchanged love letters, and he thought that I was the sweetest girl that he ever saw. Everything was lovely until one morning I came to school with one of my eyes all red and swollen and a big sty on it. He looked at me for awhile, and suddenly exclaimed: "You homely beast!" That ended our love affair.—Chicago Journal.

She Describes a Black and White Afternoon Costume.

THIS afternoon I went to Sherry's for tea with Rita Blair, who has just returned from a trip abroad. She was late, of course, so I had time to survey the scene while waiting for her. The room was crowded with well-dressed women, who chatted over their cups of tea. There were many smart costumes, and I was absorbed in admiring them.

Then I saw a perfectly-stunning figure come in the door, and a second glance assured me it was Rita.

"How beautiful you are!" I exclaimed in sheer admiration.

"Oh, I'm glad you like me," she answered with a pleased smile.

"I like you better than ever, and I don't know whether it's the French clothes or the change in atmosphere that has done you so much good," I replied.

"Well, perhaps a little of both," she answered. "I've grown a bit thinner, and, then, this costume makes one look thin."

"If you lose many more pounds you'll be a mere match stick," I observed.

"But Rita, the lines of that outfit are simply stunning."

"I do think it is rather French in inspiration," she answered, well-pleased.

"Yes, you are exploiting the new summer velvet," I remarked, noting the fine silky texture of the rich black material.

"Yes, and it's as light-weight as a feather," she answered. "They assured me I should find it so, but I could hardly believe it."

"Wonderful strides in velvet materials have been made since the frocks we had as little girls, which were always heavy and clumsy," I observed.

"I hope you like the white crepe with it," she said. "The designer wanted to use organdie, but I persuaded him that crepe came nearer filling my requirements."

"Oh, yes, I like crepe better," I answered. "I should think, no matter how sheer the organdie is, it would hardly be as soft and clinging for the undergarment and lining."

I quite approved of the smart, knife-pleated jabot, and reflected I was glad Madame had been using a good many plants this season.

"Also like the feather flowers on the shoulders," she said.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Cunningham have returned from a stay at Horn Springs. En route they visited "The Hermitage," the old home of Andrew Jackson, near Nashville and other points of interest. Among others of our citizens who are now at Horn Springs are F. A. Bloodworth, president of the Morgan County National Bank.

Miss Annie B. Malone will arrive next week from South Carolina, where she spent the summer as the guest of relatives.

THREE-MINUTE JOURNEYS

Where Every Man Hides His Feet When He's Calling

By TEMPLE MANNING

ALTHOUGH most Arabs are Bedouins or Nomads, many of this ancient race live in towns. To the traveler unused to the swaying and almost "mal de mer" inducing motion of the camel—for this is the mode of locomotion in Arabia—it is a great relief to come to one of these dingy yet picturesque towns.

With a sigh of relief the careworn and dust-covered voyager crosses the dry mat and passes through the city walls. All Arabian towns have walls and turrets. The traveler wonders what the great standpipes are rising high above the houses, and if by chance there might be some industry connected with it. But on inquiring he finds that it is the watch tower—a remnant of the middle-ages when only spears and lances were used in warfare. Today the tower would fall quickly if it were hit by the shell from a five-pound gun.

To visit in one of the Arabian houses is indeed a great pleasure, for the Arabs are most hospitable, and treat their guests royally. In fact, the whole town will squabble over the privilege of entertaining a visitor.

No mention of the length of a visitor's stay or where he is going is alluded to; this would be the height of ill manners. For this handsome and bold race are gallant and courteous to the last degree, and some of their forms of conduct are difficult for the westerner to adopt.

Although it is fascinating to live as a guest of an Arabian family, it is really difficult, and one must be on his guard if he cares to be invited again.

The main room in every Arabian house is the coffee-room. Here is where the men meet at all hours and talk and drink the Arabian coffee, which is so strong that it is apt to keep the guest awake all night.

There is no furnishing in the room save rugs. On these beautiful rugs one sits, and is very careful not to let his feet stick out in front of him. For in an Arabian house feet are to be used, but never seen.

No should visit in this land of "A Thousand and One Nights," be sure to tuck your feet under you, no matter how uncomfortable, because if you don't you will be considered bad-mannered and will not be asked to call again!

Diary of a Fashion Model

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

She Discusses the Fad for Semi-Dinner Gowns for Informal Evening Wear.

There is a very tall and very lovely interior decorator here in New York who happens to be a friend of mine. She is always good about telling me all the latest style notes from abroad, as she goes every year to get lovely old tapestries and such things. I hadn't seen her since she returned this time, so I phoned yesterday.

"I'll come around to dine with you, Miss Louise," I said. "That is, I'd love to come if you feel like talking tonight and have nothing better to do than talk with me."

"I'm full of conversation," she said. "Come over as soon as you can, because I have enough lovely things to keep you busy till dinner time."

Waiting only to freshen up a bit, I hurried over. I knew if Miss Louise said she had some things I'd like they would be well worth looking at, for I considered her things the most attractive in New York.

Her shop is on Park avenue, and her apartment up above it. As soon as I stepped into the front salon I realized there were many new and interesting things to be examined. But just then Miss Louise came in and I forgot about them when I saw her.

"What a vision in silver and gray you are!" I exclaimed.

Her hair is a lovely, silver gray, and it was offset by her soft, shimmering gown of gray charmeuse and silver.

"Your gown is stunning," I said. "It seems that I must begin talking clothes before I do tapestry and furniture, but you inspire me to it."

"I'm so glad you are impressed," she said with a smile.

"The lines are wonderfully soft and becoming," I observed, noting the loose overblouse with its kimono sleeves and line which curved over either hip.

"These semi-dinner gowns were all the rage over there, so I had two made," Miss Louise explained.

"I shouldn't blame you if the other is equally becoming," I answered.

"What is it?"

"It's Pervenche blue, very soft, with tiny bands of crystal, and is really very good looking," she answered.

"Is it made like this one?" I asked.

"Not exactly," she answered. "But they are both easily donned, with slip-on blouses and short sleeves."

"You are constantly having one or two guests at informal dinners. I should think such frocks would just exactly fill your need," I observed.

"They do to such an extent that I find myself alternating and wearing one one night and the other the next," she answered.

"Are they worn out to dinner, too?" I asked.

"Certainly," she answered. "The only difference is that it's easier to put on and less decollete than a regulation dinner-dress."

I noticed the clever way the silver braid was held in place by cross-wise stitches of silver thread. The braid itself was simply strands of silver thread uncoiled.

"This silver side fringe reminds me of a lamp shade I once made," said Miss Louise with a laugh.

"Now, I'll show you my little ebony Buddha first," she said. As she walked ahead of me I admired the clever way her soft gray skirt was pulled between her ankles as a looped panel.

Supplies Fresh Meats

The Bailey Company, has one branch house at Cullman, that is 100 x100, almost as large as the local plant. Since Swift and Company and Armour ceased to supply packing house products, this company is doing business in this line. An interesting thing is the way of an accounting machine used in the office here, was a intelligent looking something that added, subtracted, multiplied and divided. After said to the contrary work may yet be abolished, and the old idea may be right that above we will have nothing to do but sing hymns and walk the golden streets.

An interesting statement from Printer's Ink, was presented the writer by Mr. Bailey as follows:

"The jobber is the transfer station of the commercial world. He receives large shipments from manufacturers, subdividing each shipment and consolidating the subdivisions so that a small quantity of each manufacturer's shipments are sent in one large aggregate to each retailer. This is just the same as making up carload lots of shipments from various towns to some one town. If we stop to think what an expensive and inconvenient thing it would be for each manufacturer to make many small shipments to retailers, and how much it would add to the cost of consumers, we will cease to look at the jobber as adding unnecessarily to the cost of distribution."

FARMER HELD ON MURDER CHARGE

BIRMINGHAM, Sept. 1.—W. M. Yerby, 33, of rural route two, is in the city jail here this morning charged with the murder of J. A. King, 19, who operated a soft drink stand on the Mount Pinson road, several miles from town.

The trouble between the two men, witnesses state, arose when Yerby discovered King removing whiskey, which King is alleged to have hidden on Yerby's land. In the quarrel which followed King was shot, a single buckshot penetrating his brain, causing instant death.

Yerby did not make a statement. Liverpool was a good buyer and New Orleans and spot houses sold, the latter against yesterday's purchases in the South.

After the start the market held steady.

WEAK; RUN-DOWN

Carolina Lady Got So She Could Just Drag.—"Cardui Built Me Up," She Declares.

Kernersville, N. C.—In an interesting statement regarding Cardui, the Women's Tonic, Mrs. Wesley Mabe, of near here, recently said: "I have known Cardui for years, but never knew its worth until a year or so ago. I was in a weakened, run-down condition. I became draggy—didn't eat or sleep to do any good; couldn't do anything without a great effort. I tried different remedies and medicines, yet I continued to drag."

"I decided to give Cardui a trial, and found it was just what I really needed. It made me feel much stronger soon after I began to use it. I began to eat more, and the nervous, weak feeling began to leave. Soon I was sleeping good."

"Cardui built me up as no other tonic ever did."

"I used Cardui with one daughter who was puny, felt bad and tired out all the time. It brought her right out, and soon she was as well as a girl could be. We think there is nothing like Cardui."

Do not allow yourself to become weak and run-down from womanly troubles. Take Cardui. You may find it just what you really need. For more than 40 years it has been used by thousands and thousands, and found just as Mrs. Mabe describes.

ASK LABORATORY FOR TWIN CITIES MAPS SHOW WORK OF HEALTH DEPT.

The State Board of Health is shortly to establish three branch state laboratories in the state. Two of these have been definitely settled upon. One is to be located at Birmingham, another at Mobile, and one is to be established at some point in the Tennessee Valley. It was pointed out today by a prominent citizen here, that this section was the logical point for the location of the third one. It was also pointed out by this citizen who is in a position to know, that it is imperative that active efforts be at once instituted through he proper channels here. It is understood that the matter will be brought to the attention of the Board of Trade, and efforts will be made to interest that civic improvement body.

ESTIMATE MADE ON '22 COTTON CROP

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—This year's cotton crop was forecast today at 10,000,576 bales by the department of agriculture, basing the estimate on the condition on August 25, which was 57 percent of normal.

By states the condition included: Virginia condition 68, forecast 23,000 bales; North Carolina, condition 65 forecast 750,000; South Carolina, condition 46, forecast 687,000; Georgia condition 44, forecast 968,000; Alabama, forecast 826,000.

REPORT MADE
WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—The British cotton interests are "profoundly pessimistic" of the future while the French consider their prospects bright, according to a report to the commerce department today, from Edward Pickard, chief of the textile division, who is making a survey of conditions abroad.

MAPS SHOW WORK OF HEALTH DEPT.

Two maps prepared by the county health unit are conspicuously posted in the lobby of the courthouse, showing the activities of this county department. One map is prepared in such a manner as to show the health activities for disease prevention, and the location in the county where such activities were rendered. The other one shows the health work in the schools of the county, their location etc.

The inoculations were for the prevention of small pox, diphtheria and typhoid fever, by far the largest number being for typhoid. The health work done in Morgan county cost the county $416.67. In other words, it cost the people of Morgan county $.0104 per capita to maintain their health unit. Through the efforts of the health unit the sum of $3204 worth of typhoid inoculations during the month of August. Other health work done in the county during the month of August was: 160 home visits by nurse; 117 school children examined; 123 physical defects remedied; 40 sanitary toilets built; 116 sanitary inspections made; 45 nuisances abated.

To the activities of the health unit there is no doubt much being done to keep down infectious diseases. Certain it is that typhoid fever in the county has been kept down to a minimum. The positiveness of this inoculation being forcibly borne out during the progress of the World war.

Many have remarked on the scarcity of mosquitoes the past summer, and to the efforts of the health unit is due much of this credit. Pools have been drained, and other mosquito places treated with oil to prevent the eggs hatching.

His Explanation.
A small boy was given a dime by his mother to put in the plate at his Sunday school. When he returned in time for tea, he was eating rapidly out of a bag of sweets. "Where on earth did you get the money to buy sweets with?" asked his mother. "You gave me a dime," said he. "But that was for your Sunday school, and he sides—'Oh, that's all right, mother,' he interrupted. 'I met the clergyman at the door, so I got in free.'"
